Mobile is increasingly becoming a differentiating factor for great products. This creates new challenges for developers and architects. While your technical people know software development well, mobile technology advances at a pace that leaves many wishing for more in-depth knowledge.

The community around mobile technologies – Android, iOS and hybrid – has gathered great interest both in Norway and worldwide. At Mobile Era, the communities and companies are coming together to create the number one arena for mobile developers for the third year in a row. Be there to take part in the mobile revolution!

The conference will have three tracks, cover two full days and include a day of workshops as well as a conference party. We hope to gather 500 attendees from Norway, Europe and beyond. Make sure to check out the videos from last year at <https://vimeo.com/mobileera>.

The conference is managed through a non-profit organization. The organizations' board of directors represents a wide spectrum of companies in Oslo.

At a glance

- The first and largest developer conference in Northern Europe focusing exclusively on mobile technologies
- Running for the third year in a row
- Two days, three tracks, covering mobile web, Android, iOS, hybrid, design and more
- 500 attendees
- International speakers and local heroes as well

Speaker lineup

We are currently in the process of receiving submissions and inviting keynote speakers. The program will contain a mix of visionary ideas, technical deep-dives and experience reports. We have a focus on advanced topics and challenging our attendees with new knowledge.
